

Taking Responsibility.

Dear Penfabricans,

To be responsible is to be accurate in all that we do and to take responsibility at all times for the tasks that we undertake. In our daily chores, very often, we tend to take charge of only the big ticket items while leaving the nitty-gritty, mundane little things to others. We become careless and leave things to people whom we know little about or not at all. At times, we even leave these things alone to chance as if they would be taken care of miraculously by themselves.

Then, when things are not properly done or not done at all, we become disappointed, disheartened, sometimes furious; even if we had not specifically delegated the task to be done in the first place. When we realize and recognize the fact that we are the one fully responsible for the whole task at hand, both the big things as well as the tiny little ones, we would never be careless even an iota, so as to avoid an unfinished or poor job. Taking full responsibility is about ensuring that a task is accomplished in a complete and successful manner even to the smallest details. Accuracy in getting a job done will bring us honour and much acclaim. This is what separates the professionals from the amateurs. A perfectly done job is always appreciated and celebrated.

Dear Penfabricans, when we embark on a piece of work, make sure that our slips are not showing and oversights do not happen. Accuracy in what we do makes us reliable and trustworthy.

Have a restful weekend, take full responsibility by always making sure that jobs are well accomplished in full, both the big deals and the small minute little ones.

Thank you.

With kind regards,

HSTeh.
